

I need more power

The ones that follow me must have their minds intact

Lead by example

Allow them to invest in others

What is lacking

Trust

What is trust, reliability, truth and ability

Consistency and constant vs continual

Go for continual

Truth, or the closest approximation

Ability skill

make promises keep promises

Philosophy bit

Mental real estate

People are going to be their own individual choice makers

If they turn their brain off then they are a tool, the credit and blame goes to the person that is instructing them

The funding is going to be from within, if they run away with the money then GG

Start off small like hail mary bets.

Treat each person's pitch as a bet, if you think it'll work out, put a sum of money that is risk adjusted

This is almost like crowdfunding from people that you know

You are going to be obliged to help the people that you put your resources into and as such you need to know them very well

Only invest if you can contribute a skillset that can help to magnify your investment in them.

This is what changes it from a gamble to a skill game

The assumptions is that everyone wants to do something with their life and they can only find fulfilment if they get it

Money is a shorthand for the freedom associated for getting the thing that they want.

Most people just straight up don't know what they want so they're pretty happy to listen to whoever give them money

I think people should only listen to those who say things that makes sense to them

Ideology needs to be similar and serve as a starting point for them to start developing their own worldview

The process is to try and then iterate, collect the data, build experiences with people.

We need to foster repeated interactions between the same people repeatedly over a long period of time

The activities can be different but the people that you are interacting with must be interacted with on a consistent basis

The emphasis here is not on the money because it's just tokens that can be traded for goods

What is fostered here are things that cannot be bought with money, like genuine friendships

If they don't know what they're doing at least know the people that they are doing it with

If they don't know the people that they're doing at least know what you are doing.

Nobody is going to support you if you are unable to communicate your value to them

I'm trying to make humans into flesh again instead of cogs in a machine where everyone and anyone is designed to go into a system where they are infinitely replaceable due to the position being attributed to their skillset

This has to be vulnerable in the right places, we shouldn't have a culture that encourages the replacement of people

Nepotism at its finest, you only work with people that you bothered to get to know on a personal level.

Treat humans like humans, not as resources to be used and exploited

To reach that end, time and effort has to be invested before monetary investment

If someone is really dumb enough to stab someone that they know in the back then they're just scum

Scum that would kill their own to further their goals

And if you got fleeced by them, then you didn't know them well enough, simply didn't try hard enough to get to know them

In terms of hierarchy, it's fundamentally flat.

At its smallest level, its 2 people and having equal skills are fundamentally impossible

There's something to learn from everyone and it is your duty to figure out what that is and learn from them

If there's nothing to learn then find someone else to talk to

It's about setting expectations for the interaction and coming to a certain level of dedication to interacting with people

We were supposed to be taught how to socialise from an early age, but how many parents even know how to use the digital communication tools correctly

We have a few ground rules that I covered in the guidelines bit, I think that is what is required

It's a cooperation framework and one that is able to function in this slightly outdated way that we interact with each other as well as build a foundation going forward into the realm of AI where humans need to know how to be human.

I want to keep the number of parasocial connections to a minimum, no interacting excessively with digital ghosts of each other.

Have access to real humans, only the people that you interacted before in real life are real.

Make sure that the online version that you have been interacting with is still a human.

If you are incapable of discerning if the thing that you are interacting with is a human, make sure you find a way to find them in real life

This is Among Us in real life, assume that there are impostors out to get you

Trust is earned through making and keeping promises

If the relationship is terminated due to a breach in trust, take the loss.

Name and Shame then celebrate

Let them know that the community is now better because we know that a traitor has been removed

It is a joyous occasion when a traitor gets ousted
If they betrayed the people that they know and developed a relationship with, all that means is what they took was more important than the humans that they left behind.
We have no need for people who would harm the people in their vicinity over pieces of paper
To ensure that everyone is well equipped to communicate with each other we must come to an agreement that words have no inherent meaning
We need to speak in a way where you want them to understand.
Speak with words that they know, not in a way that you know
Be considerate, be patient, you are interacting with a fellow being
It's not your AI girlfriend, it's not a dumb app, it's a human on the other side.
They're not exactly like you so don't treat them in the way that you want to be treated.
Treat them in a way that they like to be treated.
And how do you know that? You ask
Use words, less assumptions are better for everyone
The ones that you should give a shit about are the ones that are around you, everything that you have not observed with your own senses are as good as an illusion
You don't have to be the best at what you do, keep improving so that you can be of service to someone that you know
Assumptions and mental shorthands are to be taken with a pinch of salt, it is not the law
If unsure, it is on the individual to verify
Pursue physical wellness
Intellectual curiosity
Healthy and supportive relationships
Feel and heal emotions completely
It is all a skill issue, all of it can be learnt.
Humans are imperfect, so try your best to help each other
Money isn't the most important, because what you spend money on is more important than money.
If you can't protect it, it doesn't belong to you.
Take your own advice
Nothing is free, be it money, time or attention. Know what you are giving up, to get what you want. Invest in where your knowledge is.
Constraints drive performance.
Limits are good and should be defined accurately
Learning from mistakes require you to document, reflect and analyse
This means writing things down and sharing it for review
Learn from what people do as well as say
There's 2 types of freedom that I'm familiar with Either freedom to do what you want, or the freedom to achieve the goals you want
Doing what you want is leisure time Achieving the goals is work
Work is the way we get things done
Leisure is the way we make connections
Either make friends or make progress

You are the voices in your head, there's no such thing as a disability
Humans are simply humans with a bunch of flaws and weaknesses
The quotes people love to quote are often misquoted. For example "the love of money is the root of all evil" is not the same as "money is the root of all evil".
Quote things that you believe in
You take full responsibility for your words even if you're quoting someone else
Speak properly and clearly, there are already sufficient barriers to communication.
Adding more ways that communication can go wrong is always a bad idea
How you do anything, is how you do everything.
Take things seriously, but that's not a reason to be mean
Any attempt to do the "it's just a prank bro" is deception and is not allowed
No lying even if you think it's for their own good
Attempt to tell what you know to be the truth at all times
Even if what you say isn't the full truth, trying to say what you know is ok
Rational compassion is sometimes a substitute for empathy.
Think about what they need to feel better and get better
Toxic compassion where you limit their growth by diminishing the pain they get from their lessons
Your role as a second party is to be a guard rail, your responsibility to others is to keep them alive
Their happiness is their responsibility, their emotions are their responsibility
If you think that you are responsible for their emotions
If you are responsible you must be able to affect it
If you are able to affect it, it is control
And if you do so its the same as emotional manipulation which is not ok
You are the reason why you die, figure out how to prolong your life and make responsible decisions if you don't want to die
No whining and complaining
Identify your problems, communicate it to someone and ask for solutions.
The world is always going to feel like everything is going to shit, it is not a new phenomenon
Calm down
Panicking is an action
And if the action does not progress towards solving the issue at hand, don't waste energy
"It's the only way" doesn't exist, you haven't explored your options enough.
No decision is forced, you're just lazy to think of alternatives
Tunnel vision is one way to be hit by a train
If your plan requires luck, then it's a bad plan.
Plans are worthless. But planning is priceless.
We must either learn to live together or we are all going to perish together as fools.
If you don't know, try. If you don't try, you'll never know.
Learn how to see. Realise that everything connects to everything else.
To develop a complete mind Study the science of art Study the art of science
What everyone says is wrong if you didn't understand them correctly. What everyone says is correct if you did.

you're not that special get over yourself

Our minds and bodies are broken, humans are so over stimulated they don't really have the time to think

Have some time to yourself

Sleep early and don't do things that numb your brain

Do the things that you like in the morning, if you don't wake up in time, you don't deserve it

Getting ahead shouldn't have us running so fast, that we pass away in attempting to pass others.

Do things at your own pace, but that doesn't mean go slow either

we want long term large scale sustainability Realising wrongdoing, is an opportunity to be right in the future.

Passion is not a substitute for competence.

What we did not prevent, we allowed to happen.

There is a "too late", and that's when you run out of moves to make. Until then keep trying.

Just because you're suffering, doesn't mean you're helping.

Keep win win relationships and win neutral relationships.

win lose, lose neutral, neutral neutral and lose lose should be avoided at all costs

Always try to do more than you have to.

Be generous with your time and energy, money is what you offer when you have nothing else valuable to them.

Stop being scared of being wrong

You'll make mistakes while growing up and if you're doing things right, you'll never stop growing up.

Your enemies is the environment, the situation.

It is always PVE, never PVP

It is not enough to get a perspective that you think is correct, you need to get all the perspectives to be correct. Keep your mind open and learning

Knowledge is not something to beat the world with, it's not a stick.

Make sure your vessel can contain what it is supposed to, or else you're gonna spill it all over the place and make a mess.

Creators create Degenerates degenerate

The destination does not exist, this is an infinite game where the goal is to keep playing

Learn how to give up the guaranteed thing for the best thing.

Pay the price for greatness or you'll never reach it

When you have zero opportunities, say yes to everything. When you find the opportunity you want to dedicate yourself to, say no to everything.

Everything is everything. Marketing isn't everything Sales isn't everything Family isn't everything Enjoyment isn't everything Product isn't everything Failure isn't everything

Passion isn't everything Productivity isn't everything Health isn't everything Everything is everything

Instead of posing as prophets, we must become the makers of our fate.

Be more concerned with being less wrong, than being correct.

Try pulling people's heads above water before trying to put yours above the clouds
Just because you aren't expected to complete it, doesn't mean that you are excused from it.
It is no measure of health to be well adjusted to a profoundly sick society.
This is a new society, learn the ropes and learn to adapt to what hopefully is a better society
One who does not read books has no advantage over the one who cannot read them, reading is an important way of gaining new perspectives
But it should not be prioritised above lived experiences
Read everything like it's the last time you'll ever read it.
Do everything like it's the last time you'll ever do it.
Third hand information is so degraded it's useless, don't spend time relaying the unreliable info.
It's not necessarily wrong, but the chance of it being sufficiently complete to be of any use is negligible
Information is everywhere but its meaning is created by the observer that interprets it.
Meaning is relative and there is no objective, over-arching meaning.
We don't rise to the level of our expectations, we fall to the level of our preparation
Every journey is a series of choices. The first is to begin the journey.
Those who don't make the decision to start the journey cannot be forced, leave them be
"I don't have time" is just saying it's not a priority.
We all have time, and we also all have priorities.
Never attribute to malice that which is adequately explained by stupidity.
Never attribute to stupidity what can be adequately explained by not actually wanting to do the thing.
If they're bad at something, it is their responsibility to get better.
Don't try to help if they don't ask for it.
And if you're bad at something and want to improve, ask for help
Pay the price to be relieved of your ignorance, be it money, time, energy or attention
If it's free, it's probably worthless.
Reward behaviour that you think is beneficial for your survival, either physical or mental survival
Play stupid games, win stupid prizes
Play better games, win better prizes
Patience has its own rewards.
Many small obstacles can make for one large problem.
Live in the present with the gift of your past mistakes
"There are too many people on this planet" is a false notion, we just don't know how to deal with it yet
Simply a skill issue, there's enough to go around
So we have to figure out a way to do it instead of killing babies implicitly by not having them
Don't rely on luck, but don't act in a way that prevents it from happening either.
Failing to succeed does not mean failing to progress.
If you don't like where you've ended up, try doing something else.
Building a bridge can get you over a problem.

Sometimes you don't have to solve problems if you can simply avoid them

We fall down when there is nothing there to support us.

Make sure that you are well supported by people, facts and logic

The end may come before we were ready to get there. And that's ok

It's harder to progress if you're leaving things behind, don't make unnecessary sacrifices

Always try to settle for more instead of less, you don't know what you need in the future so bring as much as you feasibly can without limiting yourself significantly.

The further we get, the less help we need. And that's when you can either help others or find something else to work on

A path may not be right or wrong. It may just be different. If your paths with another diverge it's ok

Find someone else that you relate to better, drifting apart is normal when the things you do change

Enjoy breathing

Enjoy the little things in life

A dead end will only stop you if you don't try to move through it.

Going a certain way may require building your own path, don't let that stop you from going where you want

Winners will always find a way to win. Losers will always find a way to lose.

Be grateful for the people in your life, for the good things that happen to you happen because of them

The first thing that anger hurts is yourself. Make sure it's worth it.

If you haven't gotten into trouble within the last week, you're not trying hard enough.

Push your limits to see if it's actually there, sometimes it's not and you're just imagining things

Power doesn't corrupt, power reveals.

Being good at something is always good.

Having more and being more doesn't make you a bad person, it provides you more options and lets you be more true to yourself.

If you're evil, don't worry too much. Someone will stop you, you can count on it.

Keep pursuing your path, you only know how the end looks like when you reach it.

Models manage mayhem

Draw images to if you can't explain with words

Share models of the world and try to convey it through alternative means.

Words are only one way to communicate.

Anything that tries to communicate is art

The value of art lies in what it compels it's audience to do

It has no intrinsic value, it's value is in it's interpretation.

And the way that we take in and interpret art is through the lens of our life experiences, and this makes up our unique perspective.

Take it in and do things with it.

The adversity is the training required to become great.

Prefer gratitude over apologies. Thanks instead of sorry.

If you ever think you gave a 100% and still had something left, that's not 100%. If you had time, money, relationships, resources left. If you are still alive, that's not 100%

Complex doesn't mean better Simple doesn't mean better

The only reason why anyone have the things they do, is because nobody else wants it more than them. Keep it that way, if you want it more than someone else

Go get it, by any means you are willing to sacrifice.

If you think it is worth more than your friends and family, go do it.

Like seriously, I'm not opposed to people doing what they want.

Make sure it's worth it. Make rational decisions.

The source of learning is struggle.

Either your struggle, or someone else's struggle.

Make sure you learn something, Discomfort is your ticket to enter.

How we perceive a problem can change every time we see it.

New experiences, new skills, new people can change the way we see things, which makes previous experiences have new interpretations, previous skills can have new uses and previous people can have new sides to them you didn't know about

Let everything compound on everything

keep your mind active, keep your body active, keep your relationships with people active

There's a difference between judgement and discernment.

Judgement is putting the hammer down, discernment is being able to tell things apart

Borrowed strength does not bring about true power.

The abilities that are given to you by the people you know are not yours. Develop your own personal skills and learn the difference between borrowed strength and power that comes from within. Knowing powerful and competent people doesn't excuse you from continuing to develop yourself.

While it's all well and good to learn to make use of these connections better by developing communications skills, it is not everything.

Only everything is everything, don't tunnel vision

They can't live your life for you, in the same way people can't sleep for you

They can't think for you, the same way that people can't eat food for you

Actions have consequences. And consequences have consequences And consequences have consequences

And consequences have consequences

And consequences have consequences

And consequences have consequences Ad Infinitum.

Second order thinking is not the end all be all, it goes on forever and ever and ever.

Not an excuse to go down the rabbit hole and waste time.

Go as far as you can each time and slowly learn how to get more efficient at it.

It's like a muscle, progressive overload is the name of the game.

Also don't forget to rest between sets

Rushing through a problem won't always give the right results, but it might.

Drastic situations calls for drastic measures, but exhaust all your options first

Take care of the people who are close to you because they look after you too, possibly in ways unknown to you.

A problem may only be difficult when you are missing the right tools, learn how to ask for help even from your people who are unlikely to have the answer.

Roll the dice more often to get more successes.

If you aren't paying attention, you will miss everything around you.

Be perceptive, receive the signals that others send you. it might not be verbal

Tools are meant to be used. Instruments are meant to be played.

Be a tool and you'll be used

Be an instrument and you'll be played with

Bravery is not the lack of fear. Fear and action are necessary for bravery to exist.

We need fear, and also we need action.

If you're in a situation that lacks either element, fix it

Reading is to inhaling. What writing is to exhaling.

Do both, or risk dying.

Listening is to inhaling. What speaking is to exhaling.

Do both, or risk dying.

Losing control in new places is ok, it part of learning

Losing control in previously explored places isn't

The fundamentals are always more important than the hacks, tips and tricks.

Don't forget to revise the basics once in a while, spend some time with the amateurs you might find something new Build it like you're going to use it. But not like only you are going to use it.

To fully understand, I need to become.

Inside jokes prevent people from coming inside, be welcoming but selective

This sounds contradictory, more like advertise to generate leads to pick from

You're trying to get applicants so that you can review them to see if they're a good fit for you

Learn how to enjoy the darkness as well as the light, because both are unavoidable.

Good times don't last forever. Bad times don't last forever. Even time doesn't last forever

You don't have attention issues, people are just that boring sometimes.

As a flip side to that, learn how to be interesting to people.

If you can't hold attention enough to convey information about what you want to tell them

Once again skill issue, it can be worked on.

I'm not particularly concerned with societies collapsing

I'm more concerned with civilisation as a whole collapsing and we return to some apocalyptic mess where we don't have the knowledge or resources left to rebuild

We might get to the point where the average person doesn't know how to survive anymore and just die out

No sweeping your issues under the rug, put it out there. But do so in a nice way.

Not confrontational, but foster an atmosphere of understanding and healing

There are no hand outs, there is no playbook, and no one is coming to save you.

You will deserve everything you have, except for your starting point.

I don't expect everyone to take control of their lives.

It takes too much effort and time to fight back for many.

But at the very least choose the people who you are giving power to.
In theory, there's no difference between theory and practice.
In practice, there's a difference between theory and practice.
Find that difference, and to find the difference, you need both theory and practice
All first hand experiences suffer from personal bias
All second hand information is outdated
All third hand information is unreliable
Outrun your ghosts, the only person you need to compete against is your previous self.
Idleness is necessary to be a complete human.
Find time to rest and recuperate
Beginners do it until they get it right. Professionals do it until they can't get it wrong.
Identify what stage you are at and do the right thing at the right time
Beginners need to find the right way
Professionals need to practice and refine
Behave how the world is, speak about how you want the world to be
I'm not trying to build society again from the ground up
I'm trying to find a way for humans to fix themselves
And unhealthy people can't come up with a healthy plan Healthy people are impossible without knowing how to be human So we need to fix the communication channels so that false information can be identified quickly and removed It's not that there's not enough information The information itself is damaged as well as malicious actors that benefit from doing so Fix human interaction and it can't be done by reverting to the old models because the environment has changed already We need to adapt and figure out the way forward before the ceiling collapses on us And we will be our own undoing